Every individual represents both a unity of personality
and the individual fashioning of that unity.
The individual is thus both the picture and the artist.

Alfred Adler

The mission of PSAS is to nurture dignity for all by encouraging democratic relationships and a sense of belonging.

PSAS and NASAP invite you to participate in one or more of the four two-day courses of the 2010 Certificate Program for Professional Studies in the Psychology of Alfred Adler—and enjoy the opportunity to learn from Robert Powers and Jane Griffith, two outstanding teachers and therapists. The site is Bob and Jane's home in Port Townsend, a lovely Victorian port and arts town on the Olympic Peninsula and a wonderful place to spend a weekend. Participants who complete the four two-day courses will receive a Certificate of Professional Studies in the Psychology of Alfred Adler.

Nearly a century ago, Alfred Adler, MD, a Viennese physician and psychiatrist, became a pioneer in psychological theory and therapy. Many of his theories underlie today's cognitive, holistic, feminist, culturally sensitive, and family systems therapies. Abraham Maslow called him the first among the "third force" psychologists—not a psychoanalyst nor a behaviorist, but a humanist. His hope was that a genuine understanding of human well-being and the need to cooperate would lead to a more democratic mindset everywhere.

Adler was particularly interested in prevention of psychological difficulties and social dysfunction. Adler's focus on education is the foundation for many current parent- and teacher-education programs such as Positive Discipline, Systematic Training for Effective Parenting, Active Parenting, Active Teaching, and Sanity Circus, co-sponsored by PSAS and Seattle PTAs and nonprofit agencies.

Adler saw the uniqueness of each person, each with a unique way of being human (our style of living), sharing a common sense of reality in inferiority feelings and community feeling and belongingness. He understood inferiority feelings as the awareness of ourselves as incomplete, and demonstrated how this feeling serves as a spur to further growth, guided by personal images of success and fulfillment. Faulty education and discouragement can mislead us into ideas of success through superiority over others on the useless side of life, while proper education and encouragement inspires ideas of success on the useful side of life, in ways of value to ourselves and others.

Adler studied the foundations of individual personality development in the family of origin, observing that in childhood we move to make a place of significance among others and that we form goals and beliefs to compensate for feelings of inferiority that serve as patterns for the life-style. Since compensation tends toward overcompensation, errors are inevitable and may continue to be supported by means of our selective inattention to any challenging evidence.

When beliefs are destructive of cooperation with others, they can be re-formed by means of psychotherapy. Adlerian theory and practice provides an empathic, collaborative process to liberate clients from constrictions by uncovering and re-evaluating unconscious patterns and encouraging the move toward relationships based on mutual respect and equality.

The Courses

The 2010 schedule and educational objectives are as follows:

February 5-6 The Basics of Adlerian Theory & Practice. Participants will learn the theoretical concepts of Adlerian Psychology and will be introduced to its practical applications through lectures, exercises, and demonstrations.

April 9-10 Personality Development & Dynamics. Participants will learn the relevance of the central concept of Life-Style and how this concept facilitates our understanding of human being and human dysfunction, and they will learn to apply Adlerian Psychology to the science and art of Life-Style Assessment with special attention to each participant's unique experience.

June 11-12 Individual Psychotherapy. Participants will learn how Adlerian theory applies in the practice of individual psychotherapy, and they will learn principles, processes, and techniques through personal exercises and demonstrations.

October 22-23 Couple, Family, & Child Therapy. Participants will learn how Adlerian theory applies in the practice of couple, family, and child therapy, and they will learn relevant principles, processes, and techniques, with demonstrations.

The Instructors

The instructors for these courses are Robert L. Powers, MDiv, MA, and Jane Griffith, MA, MAT. Bob is a Distinguished Service Professor Emeritus of the Adler School of Professional Psychology (Chicago) and a licensed clinical psychologist. He was in private practice in Chicago and for many years conducted monthly public family counseling demonstrations at the Adler School. Jane is Professor Emerita of the Adler School and a licensed clinical professional counselor. Both Bob and Jane are past-presidents and diplomates of the North American Society of Adlerian Psychology.

In 1982 they established the Americas Institute of Adlerian Studies and for many years offered a continuing education program at various locales in the US. Bob and Jane are coauthors of the texts Understanding Life-Style and The Lexicon of Adlerian Psychology, as well as numerous professional articles. They are married to each other and live in Port Townsend, traveling and lecturing in the US and abroad. For more information, please see www.adlerianpsychologyassociates.com.

For the first time, we are offering an additional one-day course in Seattle. Doug McClosky, MS, LMFC, will present the course Counseling Teenagers & Their Families. Doug has 24 years of experience counseling teens, including five years of managing a residential facility for teens. Please see www.dougsfamilytherapy.com.

CE Hours, Clock Hours, Certificates

For each course, 13½ CE hours are included for mental health professionals, at no additional cost. For the one-day course six CE hours are included. PSAS provides 13½ clock hours for educators and school counselors, also at no additional cost, and six clock hours for the one-day course. Certificates are awarded for either 54 hours (for completion of the four two-day courses) or 60 hours (with completion of the one-day course as well). Graduate students may be able to arrange for independent study credit through their schools. PSAS is an affiliate of the North American Society of Adlerian Psychology (NASAP), co-sponsor of this program. NASAP is approved by the American Psychological Association (APA) to offer continuing education for psychologists and is recognized by the National Board of Certified Counselors (NBCC) to offer continuing education for counselors. NASAP maintains responsibility for this program and its content.

Site, Hours, Accommodations, Special Needs

The two-day courses will be presented at Bob and Jane's home. The hours are Fridays 9:00 a.m.-5:00 p.m., and Saturdays 9:00 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Snacks and drinks are included. Jane will provide information on accommodations in Port Townsend. If you have special needs, please indicate that on your registration application. Please e-mail or call PSAS, psas@att.net, 206-527-2566, if you have questions.
